The Advance

The Rancher's Plight

Over a month ago the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett heard from a group of cattle ranchers, in Calgary of the distress in which their industry languished. The Prime Minister was told, and it is understood agreed, that choice beef at two and a half cents per pound on the hoof (the price ruling at that time and practically maintained since) spelt ruin for the ranchers.

About the same time Mr. Bennett's lieutenant, Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, was serving notice on the beef processing trade that prices to farmers must be increased, and he hinted that if these increases were not forthcoming the government would be compelled to act in behalf of the producers.

Mr. Bennett has returned to Ottawa. Mr. Stevens has taken for long and gone abroad. The Prime Minister has myriad of vexatious questions to deal with, the Minister of Trade and Commerce has undoubtedly been overworked and needs a rest, but meanwhile the beef producers are alone in their sorry plight; they can neither lose themselves in other tasks or seek inspiration from distant scenes.

There is no disguising the fact that the ranchers' plight is one of extreme peril. For years these men have been selling at heavy losses. As has been previously stated in this publication the ranch cost of producing a pound of beef is in the neighborhood of six cents. It is years since the selling price of a choice steer was anywhere near this figure. By dipping into their reserves, and then these were exhausted, by pledging their credits to the hills ranchers have been able to keep outfit, if not intact, at least on a productive basis. But the great majority of them have passed the day for these panaceas. An industry that in Alberta's profit years had a capital investment of $50,000,000 in cattle alone (this includes beef animals on farms as well as ranches) has dwindled until today this capital investment is in the neighborhood of $10,000,000.

Those within the industry maintain that, as a group, Alberta ranchers no longer own 20 per cent equity in their holdings. Very long established on profitable ranches in this province are today contemplating how best to step from beneath the burdens they no longer can carry.

There is an individual trait about these ranchers that makes their positions pathetic. Pioneers most of them, they have carried their burdens on their own broad shoulders. Governments have received from them no requests for subsidies, grants or special privileges. Their successes have been wrought by stern labor and clear thinking. Only in this crisis, the greatest in the history of agriculture throughout the continent, have they admitted their problem beyond them.

Aid for the cattlemen can be speedily granted in one of three ways:

The export of cattle to Great Britain could be assisted by direct government subsidy. (It is argued that the exportable surplus controls the domestic price and that the home price level would speedily rise following the

Women's Institute Elects Officers at Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the local Women's Institute was held Wednesday, Dec 6, in the afternoon, at the home of Mrs. F. Otto, with Mrs. N. Murray and Mrs. M. C. Nichols as joint hostesses.

The president opened the meeting and the secretary read the minutes of the last meeting which were adopted.

The various committees read their reports on the past years work.

Election of officers then took place, with the following results:

Pres. Mrs. J. W. Lawrence, 1st vice pres. Mrs. N. Murray, 2nd " Mrs. N. Murray. Sec. Treas. Mrs. M. Chapman. Directors: Mrs. C. W. Rideout, Mrs. E. Allen, Heathdale district; Mrs. W. Wilson, Collholme district.

A vote of appreciation was given to Mrs. J. C. Turp for the efficient manner in which she had filled the position as sec. treas.

It was decided that the W. I. would donate $10 cash and members will contribute home cooking, etc. in order to give Xmas cheer. Two groups will be formed, one to act south of town and one in town. Gifts sent in will be taken to the school where the hampers will be made up and distributed.

Twenty three members and two visitors were present, and the members gave to one another as a token of good feeling an inexpensive gift which was much appreciated.

Lunch was served at the close of the meeting by the hostesses.

Is This Progress?

Were it not for the occasional event of great significance, civilization would stagger on towards whatever goal it is heading, without mankind being any the wiser, or the more acutely aware of its steady progression. World statesmen occasionally venture the prediction that another great war inevitably would wreck the civilization of today; and the statements of these prominent men would undoubtedly be taken at their face value, were it not for sporadic manifestations of the dynamic basis which distinguishes western civilization. Other men of renown have said civilization has no goal, no great achievements to its credit, in that it is not increasing and has not increased, the sum total of human happiness. But again, some event like the front pages of the daily newspapers indicate its triumphal march-somewhere, which completely confounds Cassandra-like prophets and claimants of stagnation.

The events which have called forth this opening paragraph are, of course, those which occurred recently in the great and glorious State of California. There, two confessed kidnapers were summarily lynched by a state-all-told, crowd which, instead of being punished for usurping the functions of the state itself, are exonerated and even lauded by the chief dignitary of that state. In fact, Governor Rolph was so far from taking punitive measures against the crowd which (perhaps) saved his hangman a job, that he declared to the press his wish that he had the power to release all kidnapers held in California State prisons to the tender mercies of the same mob. It might, he added, act as a deterrent to kidnapers elsewhere in the United States. Thus civilization marches.

Possibly there is truth in his contention. It is equally true, however, that rigorous enforcement of the laws entrusted to his administration would serve the selfsame purpose and achieve as good results. If his commendation is to mean that lynch law can be invoked with impunity in the warfare against kidnaping, it might be urged that the cure is as bad as the disease. In fact, the cure itself a disease which it took more than half a century of repression to eradicate. Governor Rolph is dabbling in a strange homeopathy; and perhaps he would be employed better in tightening up the law and its enforcement, through the police and the courts, than thus encouraging revival of a discredited atavism. That law-breakers should lynch law-breakers is, in effect, a protest against the law's denials and not the inefficiency of a law-enforcing machinery. Perhaps then, Governor Rolph should begin the clean-up against kidnapers himself, and start his own office.

They have a new premier in France. M. Chautemps is, in fact, the 101st premier France has had in some 63 years. Apparently the motto over the door of the office reserved for the chief executive in France is "Here today, gone tomorrow."

Old Lawrence Sterne it was who said: "They do things better in France." It would be hard to persuade those accustomed to the more staid and dignified British process of placing and replacing Prime Ministers, to agree with this sweeping statement. Changes in the French cabinet are made without involving the machinery of an election. They just change—the tail is all. A prime minister comes, and collects a cabinet around him, of those adhering to his own political party or even sharing his political faith. He selects such individuals as appear to him to have sufficient of a loyal following among their particular groups as to ensure him a majority of the deputies. The parliament runs its course. Ministers change without consulting their platform to the people. The system removes government from the people, and tends inevitably to place the real authority in the higher class of permanent officials of the civil service. Responsible government, as Canadians know it, is impossible under such a system, while the bargaining that invariably precedes the formation of a French cabinet injects a pork-barrel element into the political arena which is repugnant to western minds.

Shipment Arrived In

First Class Condition

British Firm Well Satisfied With Honey From Saskatchewan
Saskatchewan honey arrived in Great Britain in first class condition. The honey, a carload shipment, was sent to Britain on the S.S. Brandon, via the Hudson Bay, to British importers firms.

R. W. Pugh, provincial apriarist, states that W. Waldron, Saskatchewan markets representative, England, and Mr. Keith, of the Canadian public department, made a personal inspection of the honey at the London dock. They write that the honey landed in first class condition, the cartons being clean and the honey in a uniformly good state.

The British importing firm to which the honey was consigned, writes as follows: "We are exceedingly satisfied as the honey has been delivered in excellent condition and the quality is first class."

Trying Out New Uniforms

Japanese Soldiers To Report On Silk And Wool Cloth

Official amusement expressed by the Japanese War Office over a report that silk uniforms were to be provided for the soldiers, has apparently been retracted. Experimental uniforms have now been issued to some battalions. Some of the uniforms are made entirely of silk, but most of the cloth is a mixture of silk and raw silk. The silk-clad soldiers will be asked what they think of the new uniforms and especially in preserving warmth, effects of rain and snow on them, cost of washing and repairing.

Gilding Record For England

Gilding record for England was set up by J. Laver, of the Dorset Gilding Club, at Thirsk. He remained in the air seven hours and twenty-two minutes. Mr. Laver might have continued for a longer period, but darkness interfered with visibility. Heavy rain was falling when he landed. The world record is held in Germany and stands thirty-six hours.

A Periodical Check Up

World Mean Better Health States New Orleans Doctor

"See your doctor, not your undertaker," was the message Dr. C. J. Miller, of New Orleans left at the American College of Surgeons for those who neglect to check up on their health occasionally.

He revealed that in spite of the great advances in hygiene in the last 30 years, many thousands of persons are "collared" before their time simply from their own neglect.

Snapping, for example, is almost completely preventable; yet, he said, there are 100,000 cases of it each year in the United States. Typhoid also is almost 100 per cent. preventable, he declared, but nearly 8,000 die of the disease annually.

Formula For Long Life

Woman, 109 Years Old, Gives Some Good Advice

Women, if you want to live to be 100, among other things, don't put anything on your face that you wouldn't put in your stomach.

Such was the advice of Dr. Marie Charlotte De戈leire Devonport, born 109 years ago, she said, in St. Petersburg, now Leningrad, Russia, the doctor, on a lecture tour, gave the following formula for long life:

"Never get angry; learn self-control; develop agility; be quick and lithe, not musclebound; avoid excesses of all things; don't put anything on your face that you wouldn't put in your stomach; don't let your mind die."

Coal King's Rise And Fall

Valuable Treasures Collected By Pennsylvania Man Sold For Song

Under a mammoth circus tent, on a weed-grown estate where once played some of the world's most glamorous social lights, an auctioneer at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, barked out the epilogue of a drama of the rise and fall of a king of coal. And as piece after piece of the treasures collected from over the world by the late J. V. Thompson fell under the hammer, the husky-voiced hawkshouter said, "Why, they're going for a song—going for a song!" They continued to go for a "song," and three hours after the sale began a throng of art connoisseurs and society notables had spent only about $11,000. The highest price paid for any article was $2,400 for a beautiful Kirminish rug which Thompson bought for $20,000 while on a honeymoon in Constantinople with his Broadway showgirl bride, the Honey Hawes. A richly designed Italian scarf, the first article to be sold, brought $18. A $7,500 antique tabriz Persian rug went for $685.

Profit In Forestry

Under Proper Conditions Tree Growing Promises Sure Return

Planting forests frequently has been praised as profitable business, but generally has not made much of an appeal to private enterprise. The crop is too long in growing. Nevertheless, as an undertaking for governments and for long-lived institutions tree growing under proper conditions promises sure return.

Foresters of Michigan State College recently estimated the crop value of a planting of white pine made on college lands forty years ago. The land was valued at $100,000 at the time at $15 per acre and the total cost of trees, planting labor and all other expenses in connection with the project will be $32.75 an acre. The value of the timber on each acre at present market prices is estimated at $158.75.

College authorities therefore compute that the trees have earned compound interest at the rate of 4.05 per cent. for the forty-two years.

Writing For The Cinema

Canadian Films Will Soon Be Taking Prominent Place

Capt. Howe, a member of the board of directors of the Canadian Films Producers, addressed the Canadian Women's Press Club at Toronto on "Writing for the Cinema." He traced the history of the industry generally and particularly in Canada, expressing his conviction that in an unbelievably brief period the Canadian film will be taking its place among the pictures of the world—it's despite the fact that so far Canada had been so lagging in the race that she might be considered as having hardly started.

The speaker compared the films of the various countries, pointing out their fine qualities and the reverse, assuring his audience that he was confident that in Canada there was not only people qualified to write for the cinema but that Canada had the material for the production of films that should be second to none.

It Happens Frequently

People Travelling In Europe Forget Most Foreigners Speak English

An Englishman who knew no language but his own had lost his way in Rome. In his perplexity it occurred to him to write the name of his hotel in large letters on his card and hand it to the first benign-looking individual he met.

An Italian thus accosted turned and with the charming manners of his race, accompanied the perturbed Englishman for about 20 minutes in silence until they reached the hotel designated. Then the tourist poured out valuable thanks in the only language at his command.

The Italian looked at him in amazement, then remarked in perfect English: "I thought you were deaf and dumb!"

Still interested in her hearing century over again, Mrs. Mirlanda W. Hillary recently entered her 103rd year. She was born in Frost Village, Quebec, in 1831, and has a vivid recollection of the soldiers scouring the district in 1837 the hunt for Papineau's rebels.

Her parents were Edmund Winchester and his wife, Dorothy Durrell, both of United Empire loyalists stock. In early life Mrs. Hillary came to Ontario, and her husband, Robert Hillary, a banker, died in St. Mary's in 1893. Her son served in the South African war in 1900, and settled in that country. She has a married daughter in Philadelphia and another at home.

Lord Lonsdale's Model Estate

Every Small Detail Of Management Watched By Owner

Lord Lonsdale, in addition to his many-sided sporting interests, is chairman of a publishing firm. He has wonderful way with animals—in particular with horses and dogs and birds. At meal times at Lowther each privileged dog comes into the dining room, goes sedately to its own particular corner, and there settles quietly with one eye fixed watchfully on Lord Lonsdale's movements. The stables would give any maker of filing a mass of material no other establishment of these days could offer, says the Overseas Mail. They are magnificently run in the old-fashioned English manner—as, indeed, the whole house is—without any regard to the modern love of informality and speed. Lord Lonsdale has kept all his old coaches and carriages—in themselves a small museum which will interest future generations. All of them are painted the bright yellow which makes his cars so recognizable at race meetings today. And he himself watches every small detail of the estate's management—even to the laying out of the gardens, which was done to his particular instructions; each is of a different character, Italian, French, and so on.

Arctic Cold At Equator

Instruments Register Twenty Degrees Lower At Similar Altitude

If you were looking for a colder place than the north pole, you certainly would not go to the equator to find it, would you? As contrary to fact as the statement may seem to be, unless you did this very thing your quest would end in disappointment. Meteorologists have found that it is actually colder at the equator than it is at the north pole! For proof of this scientists journeyed to the tropics and, from a position on the equator, set out sounding balloons equipped with meteorological instruments. At heights six or seven miles above the equator the instruments registered a temperature that was 20 degrees lower than the Arctic regions. As an explanation of this phenomenon it is suggested that the re-radiation of heat from the surface of the earth at the equator is retarded by humid air.

Our Best Pleasures

Six Rules By Which They May Be Tested

The best pleasures are first, the simplest—pleasures which require least machinery, least effort on the part of others; second, the least expensive; third, the most accessible; fourth, those that can be most widely shared; fifth, those that can be most often repeated without doing harm to body, mind, or soul; sixth, those that call into action the highest qualities of life. The best pleasures are what we might call top-floor pleasures; that is, the pleasures of mind and spirit. If we test our pleasures by such laws as these, that will tell us whether to go outdoors instead of indoors; to nature, and not to artificial things; to music, exercise, and not just to idle entertainment; to music, friendship, and books rather than to excitement and things that are artificial.

Procedure To Be Abolished

No More Advance Information About Grants To Farms

The Federal Department of Agriculture's established procedure of informing fair and exhibition managers well in advance the amount of the government grant they will probably receive, is to be abolished this year.

Delegates to the Canadian Association of Fairs and Exhibitions were told at their last annual meeting that there will be no advance intimation this year. George E. Rothwell, head of the livestock division of the department of agriculture, made the announcement. He said the department's estimates would be subject to revision by the government, even if the House passed them.

English Hand Knitter Ninety Years Old Still Working

Who is the United Kingdom's oldest worker? One, Robert Harrison, of Calverton, Nottinghamshire, England, can lay a strong claim to this title, for though in his 90th year he is still working at his old trade of half-hose.

Seventy-six years ago, when only 13, he began work in the little cottage industry in Calverton. He was then one of several hundred workers. Today he is one of a dozen or so who are keeping alive the ancient trade of hand-knitting in a machine-dominated world. He has been in the employ of one firm, Morley's, whose senior craftsman he is, the whole of his working life.

Lover," "Girl, Eat!"

SYNOPSIS:

Calgary High, young and beautiful art student, and Peter Anson, a struggling sculptor, fall in love and secretly decide to live apart until the time comes when Camilla can support herself. The adopted daughter of wealthy parents, it is not to inherit money when she comes of age. She is preparing herself for life with a scholarship, but she has no money to get a job to enable her to support herself. She has been making the rounds of the agencies. Peter, working in his studio on ideas for a figure which he hopes to enter in a competition to study abroad, receives a call from a beautiful model, Sylvia Tidewell, offers to work for almost nothing if he will employ her. He cannot refuse and promises to think it over again if it's all right.

(To Be Continued)CHAPTER XX

When Sylvia Todd had gone, Peter seemed the loss of agitation. Her visit had rekindled again that fondness of his life—to study abroad with pleasure and work at the Trocadero. His desire to enter the exhibit did not guarantee the opportunity, but he believed that he stood the chance with a good chance.

But with his marriage to Camilla, he had put that hope aside resolutely. Should he win the scholarship, it would mean that he must take Camilla with him and support her, or leave her behind. He could not do the former and he would not do the latter. So he had convinced himself that there was little chance of his winning, and decided to devote his time to more remunerative pursuits.

Whether or not Camilla wanted him to feel responsible for her, he did, and he must see to it that he could take care of her soon. Furthermore, he had resolved that if art for art's sake did not begin to pay dividends soon, he would commercialize it.

But Sylvia Todd—a girl—had stirred again that greatest ambition which he would have sacrificed to nothing in the world except his love for Camilla. He was restless all day, could not work in the studio. He went to the park after his class and wandered about aimlessly, thinking, debating what he should do. Perhaps if he entered the exhibit and lost, it would be the best thing for him, after all. He would have the satisfaction of knowing that he could not have gone abroad, anyway. At least, he would be more settled and content.

Strangely enough, when he saw Camilla that same evening, it was she who introduced the subject that weighed most heavily upon his mind. "By the way, Peter, have you decided anything about your entry for the exhibit?" They had strolled to the park, where it was slightly cooler. The day had been oppressively warm and the studio stifling.

He started, as if he had struck him, for he was still revolving the matter in his mind. "Funny you should ask that, when I've just been thinking about it," she said, surprised.

"Because I had stopped thinking about it," quietly.

Camilla faced him. "Stopped thinking about it? Why, Peter Anson! Since when?"

He avoided her eyes. "Well, I thought I hadn't much show of winning and—"

"No one is better," she contradicted him.

"There will be more entrants than usual this year. The closer money is, the more there are who try for scholarships."

"And what if they do? Even if you should not win, you could lose nothing."

"And if I should win—" he hesitated.

A moment of poignant silence and then Camilla understood. "Is that what has troubled you? Oh, Peter, darling, why didn't you tell me?" she cried with consternation.

"I see your side of it now, yes, I'm sorry."

"There are always two sides to anything which concerns you and me, Peter. Remember that, won't you?" she pleaded anxiously.

"Always," he pledged, with a firm, hard kiss.

Presently, he said. "Now help me decide about the subject. Of course, a fountain idea is always good stuff. I don't dare to plan for more than one figure because I couldn't afford several models—"

"But you must not sacrifice success to a meager expense like that," Camilla objected vehemently. All her life, she had been accustomed to extravagance and luxury of the sort which the Hoyts indulged, and this realization of what a little money could mean to an ambitious youth, appalled her. She rebelled at the ignominy of it.

"I don't think that will be necessary," he reassured her. "I had thought of making a full figure standing, wearing a draped tunic-madonna-like, pouring water from an urn into the upstretched hands of a child with a smaller child kneeling below and catching the water again in its cupped hands, gracefully. Woman pouring out her life to youth."

"That would be beautiful," she exclaimed softly.

"But nudes always are favored," Peter continued. "Of course, they are more difficult, and should be. For such a figure I had an idea of youth symbolized as drinking eagerly of life—a girl poised on tiptoe and her hands holding to her lips a graceful chalice or a fluted shell—"

"That is lovely, too; perhaps better than the other. You must decide. You do have marvelous ideas, darling."

"Have you something different to suggest, dear?"

"I'm sure I couldn't improve on your ideas, if I thought about it for weeks. And I think this effort should be your own very own idea. I'd rather not interfere, but I'll do anything I can to help you if you will only tell me what it is."

"Just be your own dear self," he told her, with a new note of winged hope in his voice.

Fungus Spores Survive Cold Eleven Miles In Air

First scientific results of Lieut. Commander T. G. W. Settle's stratosphere flight made public showed that life in the form of fungus spores or molds can survive 11 miles above earth where humans would die of exposure.

Spores of seven kinds of fungi or tiny plants, which Commander Settle carried to the stratosphere on the outside of his balloon "Gondole," lived through temperatures far below zero, rarefied air, low atmospheric pressure and increased ultra-violet light to which they were subjected to on the trip, reported F. G. Meier, plant pathologist of the department of agriculture.

Spores germinated readily after their return.

It was the first time in the history of science that living spores had been sent to such a height above the earth and brought back for scientific analysis. They were carried inside and outside cotton balls tied to the gondola of the balloon.

The spores were those of common fungi that float about everywhere near the earth's surface. Meier sought to learn how high in the air they might travel and live. The tests show, he said, that these spores, too small to be seen without a microscope, are among the hardiest forms of life in existence.

But I thought I was protecting you in this."

"Don't you suppose I should have been very much grieved if I had discovered so late that I had kept you out of the exhibit?"

"I see your side of it now, yes, I'm sorry."

"There are always two sides to anything which concerns you and me, Peter. Remember that, won't you?" she pleaded anxiously.

Fire Farm Insurance

Five-Year Average Shows Companies' Losses $1.19 For Every Dollar Premium

In 1931 insurance on farm properties cost Canadian fire insurance companies $1.33 for every dollar paid in premiums. That was a high year. Over a five-year period from 1927 the average losses paid on farm properties amounted to $1.19 for every dollar paid in premiums. These were not the worst risks—tanneries, woolen mills, boot and shoe factories had considerably higher losses—but they were in the unprofitable class by a big margin.

John Burns Retired From Public Life
In 1918

John Burns, the first working man in the United Kingdom to become a cabinet minister, who has recently celebrated his 75th birthday, gave up the post of president of the government board on the declaration of war by the British Government in 1914 and retired from public life altogether four years afterward.

He never discussed in public the reasons for his retirement. He left parliament at the end of the war, after having represented Battersea in the House of Commons for 29 years. Mr. Burns, who lives on the north side of Clapham Common, is a great authority on London life and history.

Going To South Africa

Government Invites Prince George To Pay Official Visit

Prince George has been officially invited by the Government of the Union of South Africa to visit that country during the early part of next year. His Majesty has approved of the visit, so that the Prince, under present arrangements, will sail from England about the middle of January. This will be Prince George's first visit to South Africa, although he has visited most of the other Colonies of the Empire. Many of his previous visits to foreign countries were paid to him when he was in the Navy. During that time he saw service with the Mediterranean and Atlantic Fleets, the China Squadron, and on the American and West Indies Station.

Famous Men Good Knitters

One Has Invented Special Wool-Winding Machine

The fact that the Prince of Wales recently sent a scarf he had knitted himself to the Personal League of Service has caused a good deal of interest. His Royal Highness is, however, far from being the only celebrated man who finds relaxation in a pair of knitting needles. Lord Jellicoe, many other sailors, is an expert at knitting. Sir Evelyn De la Rue, of the famous printing family, is also an expert knitter, and even invented a special wool-winding machine for his own benefit.

England Keeps Old Buildings

Removal Of Historic Castles And Abbeys Is Forbidden

Glories of the past are being preserved now before the march of time has destroyed them. In London and the neighboring counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, Essex and Hertford, there are about 250 castles, abbeys, and other historic buildings, and relics which have been scheduled as "ancient monuments," and as such they must not be removed or interfered with in any way.

Canadians Using More Snuff

Canadians are chewing more snuff. In September, 1932, a total of 74,254 pounds of snuff were imported into Canada, a bulletin from the department of national revenue tells us. This year, for September, the total was up to 74,869 pounds. That is a sign of recovery that cannot be sneezed at.

Capt. C. O. Peters Passes Away In Denmark

News was received (today) Thursday from Copenhagen, Denmark, by Mr Guss Cook containing the sad news of the sudden death of Capt. C. O. Peters, proprietor of the Chinook Hotel.

Decesased was riding a bicycle attempting to ride up an extremely steep hill, on the highway out from Copenhagen of which he never reached the top. He was suddenly stricken with a heart attack, from which he never recovered. A truck driver who was a short distance behind Capt. Peters saw him fall from his bicycle, he at once phoned for an ambulance, which arrived within ten minutes, but before they reached the hospital he had passed away.

Captain Peters had planned to leave Denmark, where he had been visiting with relatives, for Porta Rico, U. S. on Dec. 24th.

Capt. C. O. Peters will be well remembered here having purchased the Chinook hotel from J. C. Connell about 3 years ago. During the time that he was here he was constantly making improvements and he had good ideas and was very progressive. If during the time Capt. Peters was in Chinook conditions had been better he certainly would have done much to build up the town. Capt. Peters organized a chamber of commerce and during his stay was president. On leaving here he engaged Mr. G. Cook as manager, who later rented the hotel.

removal of the surplus.)

The government could inaugurate a system of imposing similar to the Patterson scheme applied to butter in Australia under which all producers contribute toward recouping losses on exports, or

A National Livestock Marketing Board could be established to set the price of all farm animals, including beef, taking this prerogative out of the hands of the processing trade wherein it rests at present;

A fourth possible course, that of investigating into the practices of the processing and distributing of beef and the narrowing by legislation, if necessary, of the profits taken by those between the producer and the ultimate consumer, while a project enthusiastically endorsed by both aggrieved parties would mean fatal delay. A corpse, after all, is never interested in a post mortem statement.

No one of the three methods suggested is without its defects. Each has its champions and its enemies among both economists and cattlemen. Each on the other hand, has merits which would quickly make themselves felt in the present extremity. One of these three policies should come operative in the Dominion without delay, and, following its establishment, an authoritative enquiry should be instituted to establish, once and for all, the right of the man producing the beef to a larger share of the consumer's dollar and the right of the consumer to his meat at a reasonable price.

The issue is squarely before the Prime Minister, and, by reason of his utterances on the subject, the Minister of Trade and Commerce. The cattlemen await their action.

TURN ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY

The Toronto Star, commenting editorially on President Roosevelt's monetary policy, makes the following statement: "The opposition to inflation comes mostly from the creditor classes who have fattened at the expense of the debtor classes throughout the depression. It is the turn of the debtor classes to have an innings."

The most rabid opponents of an adjustment of debt burdens are those whose reckless speculation, stock splitting, melon cutting, and over capitalizing reduced industry to its present extremity, interests that should have the grace to hide their diminished heads."—(Wheat Pool Budget)
